

Stings of Management Mini-Lessons

- Readers and writers know their role during the mini-lesson/conference.
- Readers and writers move from the mini-lesson to their seats quickly and quietly.
- Partners listen to one another and respond accordingly.
- Readers and writers know and practice the appropriate use of talk in the workshop.
- Readers and writers use their time effectively.
- Readers and writers know what to do when they have finished their work, but the time is not up.
- Readers and writers share materials appropriately.
- Writers use writing folders, paper choice, and other structures of the Writing Workshop.